State Driver's License

Breakthrough in Smart Technology

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA - If you're the victim of an accident, natural disaster or terrorist attack, a quick scan with any smart device of a QR code sticker attached to your driver's license or passport, displays your emergency profile which can include information such as your medical alerts and conditions, emergency contacts, prescriptions, allergies and blood type. Your profile can even display a copy of your auto insurance card and any other important documents.

Account Medical is making its way across the USA one state at a time by offering each State Driver's License Department its patented PEIS (Personal Emergency Information System) software.

David McDonald, CEO of Account Medical says, "We are definitely in need of a change when it comes to safety and responsive action, especially when timing is critical. All first responders work under high pressure. Our PEIS software provides a much faster method of accessing a person's vital information which alleviates some of that stress and demand and in turn helps save more lives".

David continues: "It's unknown to many but, interestingly, there are only five states that offer the public any type of emergency information database in which to enter even basic emergency contact or medical information. What's more limiting is the fact that this information can only be accessed by law enforcement personnel after running your driver's license and manually checking for the information. Worse yet, some of these database systems use outdated technology, dating back to 2007. By contrast, our high-tech QR-based system provides an immediate view of the person's profile that they have complete control over: The customer provides all the vital information they want first responders to see in case of emergency. When the person's medical condition is determined by scanning their QR code sticker with any smart phone or tablet, treatment can be administered much faster which in turn can save their life. This is, by far, the most effective technology to appear to date that addresses this vitally important issue.”

Account Medical's PEIS system will soon be available at your local license tab bureau as State Departments approve its implementation. The service can be ordered at the same time while getting your tabs or renewing your license at a reduced cost of only $9.95 a year.

Account Medical is a is a veteran-owned company that provides emergency alert ID systems within a variety of industries worldwide.
